James William Blades

 New York, New York

Bio

James William Blades is a British composer and producer based in New York, known for his distinctive work in film. He has collaborated with visionary artists and directors such as Beyoncé, Letitia Wright, AG Rojas, Theaster Gates, Kahlil Joseph and Grace Wales Bonner, developing a unique sonic style he likens to landscape painting.

Blades continues to expand his creative reach, collaborating with Letitia Wright on her directorial debut Highway to the Moon and scoring Our Hero Balthazar, directed by Oscar Boyson and starring Asa Butterfield and Jaeden Martell, set for release in 2025. His work has been exhibited at prestigious institutions such as the Venice Biennale, Serpentine Gallery, 180 The Strand, and Palais de Tokyo. Currently, he is preparing for the release of his debut solo productions.
