Bio

Pete Droge is a celebrated singer-songwriter whose poetic voice and understated style first caught fire with his 1994 debut Necktie Second, earning praise from critics like the Los Angeles Times and producing the multi-format radio hit “If You Don’t Love Me (I’ll Kill Myself),” featured in Dumb & Dumber. Over the years, he’s toured with Tom Petty, appeared in Almost Famous, co-founded the Americana supergroup The Thorns, and composed for film and TV—all while releasing a string of acclaimed solo records. Droge returns with Fade Away Blue (out August 22), a cinematic and soul-searching new album produced with Grammy-winner Paul Bryan.
